

AFROS & AUDIO VIRTUAL PODCAST FESTIVAL

The Most Nuanced Voice in The Room

DESCRIPTION:

It's time we discuss the power of Black women's voices within podcasting.

Takeaways:

- The necessity of Black women's voices in adding context and nuance to the podcasting space.
- An ode to the dynamic nature of Black women at any intersection.
- The path to meaningful and complex conversations with and about Black men.

FACILITATOR:

Stephanie Williams is the host and producer of the Mocha Minutes Podcast and one-fourth of the hosting team of the Ratchet Aunties and Uncles Hour, a sister show of Mocha Minutes currently on hiatus. She is a native of Baltimore City, a proud Towson University graduate, a beloved daughter, sister, aunt, and friend. She has a gift for discussing various topics in a nuanced and empathetic fashion. She is a gifted singer, keen observer and someone who always stands up for what she believes in. For fun, she hones her exemplary make-up, event planning and design skills. She works as a Human Resources professional in the private sector.
